Introduction

There are presently three English language bibliographies for the study of Dutch politics: Daalder (1989) and Andeweg and Cohen de Lara (1999a, 1999b). Andeweg and Cohen de Lara (1999b) is an abridged version of their (1999a) bibliography, to be used in conjunction with Daalder (1989). This bibliography builds on Andeweg and Cohen de Lara (1999a) and covers publications from 1998 through 2007. Andeweg and Cohen de Lara (1999a) is now available on CD-Rom and accessible through the Dutch library system Picarta under the title Compendium voor politiek en samenleving.

This bibliography can not claim to be complete and comprehensive for the period covered. First and foremost, all the so-called grey publications that often are accessible through the internet have been ignored. These grey publications cover all series of (working) papers and research reports issued by researchers from various university departments or academic research institutes on their websites. Although these publications offer much useful information on aspects of Dutch politics they tend to increase in numbers very rapidly. For the sake of brevity of the bibliography it is assumed that the relevant papers and reports will eventually have been published as articles in academic journals or as chapters in academic books.

Next, no publications have been included that were published by Dutch government ministries, Dutch advisory bodies like the Scientific Council for Government Policy (Wetenschappelijk Raad voor het Regeringsbeleid – WRR) or the Netherlands Bureau for Policy Analysis (Centraal Plan Bureau – CPB), or by the many other quasi non-governmental or semi-public Dutch policy research institutes. These corporations publish many relevant academic reports on aspects of Dutch politics and policies that are usually also publicly available on their websites.

Furthermore, no publications have been included that were issued by international corporations and organizations like the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), the Worldbank, or the European Union (EU). These organizations also publish many relevant reports on aspects of Dutch politics and policies that are often publicly available on their websites as well.

Finally, chapters in edited volumes seem to be not systematically reported in Picarta. Therefore, in an effort to be as complete as possible, the assistance of Rudy Andeweg, Uwe Becker, Mark Bovens, Joop van Holsteyn, Hans Keman, Paul Lucardie, Philip van Praag, Bert Jan Verbeek, Anna van der Vleuten and Marcel Wissenburg is gratefully acknowledged.
